Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claim 13 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Line 1, the limitation "means to at least temporarily support" is confusing because it was not clear whether it's same as "means to at least temporarily support" as set forth in claim 11.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1- 4, 17-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Blair et al U.S. Patent 5,462,505.

Blair et al disclosed an apparatus comprising a first inflatable section (base 16) having an interior open to an airflow from a blower (34) which provides support for the first inflatable section; a second inflatable section (14) attached to the first section and having an interior that is separated from the interior of the first section; a third inflatable section (14) attached to the second side of the first section and having an interior that is separated from the interior of the first section; the first inflatable section includes a top surface that could be used as a slide as shown in Fig. 1; Figs 3 and 4 show a plurality of valves or holes (102) between the seams of the inflatable members for preventing all of the air from members from escaping.

With regards to the expression "the blow is continually running", such limitation is interpreted as an intended use of the blower. The specification of the present application does not specify what period of time is considered "continually running", and the specification also indicated when the blower is stopped, the apparatus is still be able to support itself without collapsing (see page 4). The blower of Blair et al is considered "continually running" during blowing air into the sections, and the valves or holes (102) as discussed above would allow the apparatus of Blair et al not to collapsed when the blower (34) is stopped.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6-12, 22, and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Blair et al.

It is noted that Blair et al failed to specifically teach the dimension of the apparatus as set forth therein. However, Gordon disclosed that the apparatus is intended be used by adults as well as children. Accordingly, it would have been a matter of design choice to manufacture the slide of Blair et al with any desired dimension for the purpose of accommodating different types of user in a safe playing environment.

Regarding claims 20-23, the above explanation would constitute the recited steps as set forth in these claims.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claim 5 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 14-16 are allowed.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to all pending claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
